A closeup of a small boat (banka) in the Philippines showing it's construction, a powered outrigger boat passing by, then me making an obnoxious noise to get my wife’s attention.

The traditional Filipino watercraft called the "Banca Boat" looks just like this.

Deep V hull, a couple of outriggers to keep it from falling over.

In that one, sounds like they have a car engine.

They come in all shapes and sizes.

They just put car engines in banca boats, truck engines, they use the transmission right out of the vehicles.

Everybody uses them. They're easy to fix, as they are made out of plywood. Same as the one I'm sitting in now, but I've obviously got the paddle version.

They come in all different shapes and sizes.

There's a pretty good example right there (in the video!)

That's about a mid sized banca boat. We'll see soon how many people it carries in a moment. Some of them carry 5 engines in them and hold 300 people.

That one has got a capacity of 100. On busy days though, I can guarantee you, they'll cram 150 people in there. But yeah, they're easy to fix, just plywood and a truck engine.

If you want see more banca boats, come to the Philippines! Just to get to Badladz, you'll need to take a banca boat! Book your stay today!

Wondering where it is? Check out http://badladz.com/how-to-get-to-puerto-galera/

Badladz Adventure Resort
Muelle Pier, Puerto Galera 5203, Philippines
+63 43 287 6410 (Mobile)  +63 919 577 2823  3184
http://badladz.com

Badladz Beach Resort
Small Tabinay Beach, Puerto Galera 5200, Philippines
+63 920 955 6410 (Mobile)  +63 919 577 2823
http://badladz.com